

ABSTRACT

In accordance with the invention, an optical fiber is coupled to a planar waveguide through 1) a series of planar waveguide segments of enlarged cross section and 2) a segment of vertically tapered cross section. The combination of spaced segments and tapered 5 segments provide efficient coupling over a much shorter length than required for conventional adiabatic coupling.